Many areas to prioritize for Mayor-Elect Marty Walsh

Time to act. Walsh takes office in less than two months, and local groups shared their ideas for his top priority.

As the city's first new mayor in 20 years, Mayor-Elect Marty Walsh will have a lot of decisions to make to shape the city, its departments and its future.

While it's not yet clear what his first order of business will be, it is clear that a lot of people have a lot of ideas for what should top Walsh's priority list.

Metro asked members of various organizations what they believe Walsh should focus on when he takes office on Jan. 6. The answers varied from supporting businesses and innovation to advocating for expanded public transit.

For Hannah Huke, a member of the city's ONEin3 council that was launched by Mayor Thomas Menino, the focus should be on fostering the city's innovation community. She believes it would help keep young people in Boston.

"It would help make it more favorable to set up shop here and grow here and create their roots in the city," she said.

Quoted

"He should start soliciting conversations around the city to put together an agenda."

Greg Selkoe
Founder, Future Boston Alliance

Shea Coakley, a fellow ONEin3 council member and the founder of LeanBox, said that finding ways to keep the entrepreneurial support going should be a priority.

"Boston is solidifying itself as the start-up capital of the East Coast. There should be programs that continue to nurture the entrepreneurial environment," he said.

During the campaign, Walsh said he was a proponent of late-night T service. Advocating for a transit system that meets the needs of people who commute outside of rush-hour is one of the priorities Walsh should have, said Stuart Spina, a member of the T Riders Union.

The Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce sees education and job growth as areas Walsh should prioritize. Both of those areas help keep the business climate competitive, said Jim Klocke, executive vice president of the Chamber.

"If we have job growth we can do an awful lot of great things in Boston," Klocke said.

Walsh continues to work with his transition team and said some announcements were likely later this week.

At his first news conference as mayor-elect, Walsh said he got some advice from Menino.

"He said be careful, move forward and he said always keep the residents and the city of Boston No. 1," Walsh said.

Grisly details revealed in deaths of family

Two infant twin boys had their throats slashed by their father, who also probably strangled their mother before taking his own life Monday in the family's Arlington home, two law enforcement officials told the Globe Tuesday.

An autopsy was underway to determine the cause of death of Scott D. Jones, his wife, Mei Kum Jones, both 43, and their sons, Colt and Cameron, who would have turned 1 on Nov. 26. Scott D. Jones moved out of the couple's home a few days ago and had previously attempted suicide. GLOBE

Police warn of cell phone thefts in Dorchester

Boston police issued a warning after multiple people in the Dorchester neighborhood were robbed of their cell phones.

Police said on Monday that there have been four reported robberies since the start of the month. In most of the robberies, the suspect used a knife or scissors to threaten and rob the victims who were out walking.

The most recent robbery took place just after midnight Sunday.

Police said a woman walking from the JFK MBTA station was approached from behind by two men who demanded her money and phone. METRO

Ninety-nine problems. Restaurant employee gets trapped in ceiling

An employee of the Ninety-Nine Restaurant in Hudson had to be rescued Sunday after getting trapped in the ceiling.

The man reportedly locked his car keys in the manager's office, and attempted to climb through the ceiling over the kitchen to retrieve them, but got stuck around closing time.

"Our guys had to undo some conduit bolt pipes to get him out. ... This was a strange call," Hudson Fire Chief John Blood told the MetroWest Daily News. METRO

Woman fatally hit by car, dragged three miles

A Norwood man pleaded not guilty yesterday after he allegedly struck and killed a Wrentham motel manager with his pickup truck late Monday night, then dragged her body three miles.

Moses Acloque, 22, was arrested after a state trooper spotted him driving erratically in Foxboro. The trooper initially thought Acloque was dragging a deer carcass under his truck, according to a police report. He was charged with leaving the scene of an accident resulting in death.

Acloque / MARK STOCKWELL, POOL

The body of 58-year-old Kanchanben Patel was found near Patriot Place. A police report said that before the trooper arrived, Acloque and a passenger had allegedly gotten out and inspected the body before putting the truck in reverse to dislodge it and drive away.

His defense attorney said that Acloque fearfully fled the motel after an altercation involving staff.

Bail was set at $3,000.

Hubway will experiment with staying open throughout the winter months in Cambridge. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Hubway to stay open in Cambridge

Ice-cycling. The bike-sharing system is giving winter operation a test run.

One day after its seasonal shut down in Boston, Somerville and Brookline, Hubway announced that stations in Cambridge will remain open through the winter to test the feasibility of year-round operation throughout the Boston-area.

The public bike-sharing system has operated on a seasonal basis since it launched more than two years ago.

"We are pleased at the opportunity to pilot Hubway service year-round," Cambridge City Manager Richard C. Rossi said in a statement. "We're committed to supporting sustainable transportation options, and we are excited to continue the program this winter season. We do ask for everyone to use care when riding under winter conditions and also request your patience and understanding as we work with whatever nature brings us in terms of weather."

According to Hubway, snow removal will become part of the daily responsibilities of a field team coordinated by its dispatch office. The team is on the street from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day and is stocked with equipment to keep stations clear of snow and ice.

During extreme inclement weather, the sharing system may temporarily close. Cyclists will be kept informed by announcements on social media and the Hubway website. Station alerts will also be emailed to Hubway members.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Tips for winter cycling

Always plan for an alternative mode of transportation in case a blizzard hits.

- Fewer daylight hours, glare and foggy conditions beg for light-colored clothing and reflective materials.
- Cyclists may ride in the general travel lane, not only the bike lane, and should do so if the bike lane is snowy or icy.
- Local bike shops offer gloves and earmuffs that do not obstruct helmet use.

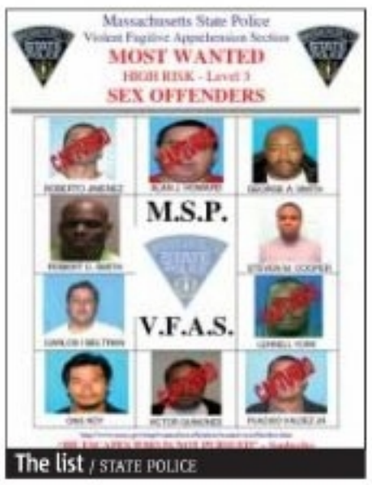
Staties arrest half of sex offenders on most-wanted list

Public help. State police said tips from the public helped lead them to some of the fugitives.



The list / STATE POLICE

Half of the state's most wanted sex offenders were captured in recent days after police received tips from the public.

State police had released the most-wanted list on Monday. As of Tuesday afternoon, five of the men on the list — Alan Howard, Roberto Jimenez, Lennell York, Victor Quinones and Placido Valdez Jr. — had been captured.

Howard was arrested in East Boston Tuesday afternoon. Jimenez was also arrested on Tuesday afternoon in Holyoke.

York, 42, was arrested on Tuesday morning after police received a tip that he was at a home in Fitchburg. York was arrested after police found him hiding in the basement. He was wanted for failing to register as a sex offender. In 1999, York was convicted of indecent assault and battery on a child under 14.

Valdez, 34, who was convicted in 2000 of rape of a child and was wanted for failing to register as a sex offender, was arrested without incident in Beverly on Monday after police received a tip.

Police on Monday also received a tip that Quinones, 48, was hiding at a home in Taunton. He was arrested after he tried to flee and then hide under a porch. Quinones was also wanted for failing to register as a sex offender.

Health care website has security bugs, experts warn Congresss

Rollout. The site has been bedeviled by technical glitches since its launch on Oct. 1.

The website at the center of U.S. President Barack Obama's health care overhaul has security flaws that put user data at "critical risk" despite recent government assurances it is safe to use, a respected security expert said on Tuesday.

"There are actual, live vulnerabilities on the site now," David Kennedy, head of computer security consulting firm TrustedSec LLC, told Reuters before testifying at a congressional hearing on the topic "Is My Data on HealthCare.gov Secure?"

Kennedy, a former U.S. Marine Corps cyber-intelligence analyst, presented a 17-page report describing the problems to the House Science, Space and Technology Committee. It does not go into specifics in some areas, he said, because that could provide criminals with a blueprint for launching attacks.

"There is a lot of stuff that we are not publicly disclosing because of the criticality of the findings," Kennedy said. "We don't want to hurt people."

When asked to describe the severity of the threat that they posed to the public, he said it was a "critical risk."

The HealthCare.gov site collects data including the names, birth dates, social security numbers, email addresses and health care information about its users that criminals could use to engage in a wide variety of scams.

"The Obama administration has a responsibility to ensure that the personal and financial data collected by the government is secure," said Lamar Smith, the Texas Republican who is chairman of the House committee. REUTERS

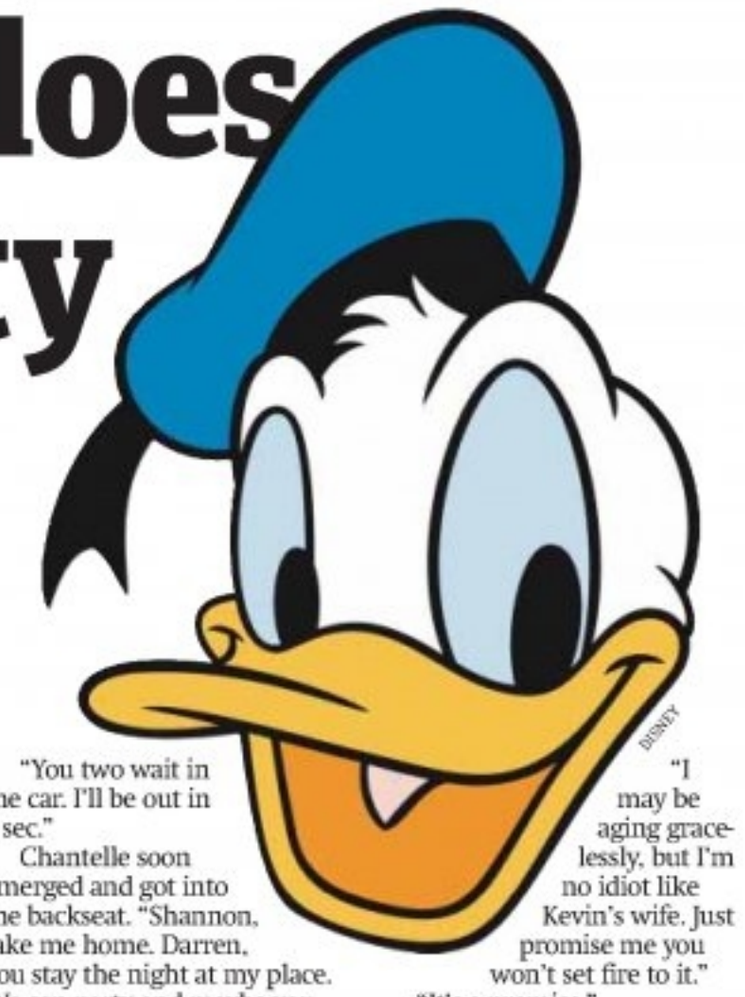
DOUGLAS COUPLAND

Douglas Coupland is a Canadian writer, artist and designer. His first novel was 1991's "Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture." His novella, "Temp," of which this is the tenth installment, will be running online and in the pages of your daily Metro each weekday through Nov. 29.

Day 13: Temp does ambulance duty



I asked Darren to put Dan into the BMW's backseat. "If we dump him by the door at Crown, they'll be forced to take pity on him."

Darren rifled through the glove compartment. "Look! A Blackberry Z10!" The Blackberry then promptly rang (ringtone: "Dust in the Wind" by Kansas). "Hello?"

A woman squawked on the other end. I grabbed the receiver. "Hello, who's this?"

"It's Chantelle, Dan's wife. Who's this?"

"I'm Shannon. I'm a temp at Dan's office. He had an accident and we're trying to take him to a hospital but he doesn't have his credit cards so nobody wants him."

"Come to our house and pick me up."

"Aren't you in Florida?"

"I found a card with a pile of unused frequent flyer miles so I returned early."

Chantelle was on the curb. Her lips were swollen like Donald Duck's beak, and it was hard to not stare.

"I know I look strange but I never expected to get old and then one day it happened and, as you can see, I'm not handling it well. I know I look ridiculous."

On cue both Darren and I chimed, "No, you look great!"

Darren added, "I'm sure your lips will look terrific once they deflate, Chantelle."

Chantelle was unruffled by the sight of Dan in the back, and with me at the wheel and Darren in the passenger seat looking and smelling very street-y. Chantelle removed a fifth of vodka from her purse. "Any takers?"

Darren eagerly accepted, and we soon arrived at Crown Permanente. "You two lug him in," she said. "I'll handle the staff."

"You've got your credit cards, then?"

"Cards shmards. A well-dressed, well-nourished white woman with obvious cosmetic surgery is welcome in any hospital on the planet."

Dang if she wasn't right. The supermodel nurse beamed at her, while another fetched her a cappuccino and asked which satellite music station she preferred. We dropped Danimal's carcass inside the door and two hot guys who looked like Qantas flight attendants whisked him away. It couldn't have been more pleasant.

"You two wait in the car. I'll be out in a sec."

Chantelle soon emerged and got into the backseat. "Shannon, take me home. Darren, you stay the night at my place. We can party and maybe you can take a shower later. Dan's clothes will fit you, too. Shannon, you keep the car for a few days."

"Seriously?"

"I may be aging gracelessly, but I'm no idiot like Kevin's wife. Just promise me you won't set fire to it."

"It's a promise."

I feel like a bad person, but I was so excited to have a Beemer for a few days that I forgot to ask what was wrong with Dan.

Was Brittany Murphy poisoned?

When Brittany Murphy passed away suddenly in 2009, the official cause of death was pneumonia and anemia. Most people assumed that, in the case of a super-skinny, erratic starlet, it was a euphemism for death by drug abuse. When her husband, Simon Monjack, died just five months later of the same cause — pneumonia and anemia — that fit neatly in with the theory.

However, Murphy's father, Angelo Bertolotti, wasn't satisfied. He recently secured the rights to send samples of Murphy's hair and tissue to a lab for independent testing. The Examiner has the lab report, and it tells a shockingly different story:

"Ten of the heavy metals evaluated were detected at levels higher than the [World Health Organization] high levels. ... If we were to eliminate the possibility of a simultaneous accidental heavy metals exposure to the sample donor, then the only logical explanation would be an exposure to these metals administered by a third-party perpetrator with likely criminal intent."

Heavy metals such as those found at high levels in Murphy's body are often present in rat poison and insecticides. They can cause all of the symptoms that Murphy and Monjack suffered before their deaths.

It is hard to remember all the way back to 2007 when Murphy and Monjack were married, but the two were frequently the target of tabloid speculation. Monjack had a shady criminal past, and once he married Murphy, she started to act increasingly strange and was soon scarily gaunt. Murphy started losing jobs — she was allegedly fired from "The Caller" due to being difficult (with Monjack picking fights). Shortly before her death, Monjack was rushed to a hospital after his plane landed at LAX. TMZ reported that Monjack was incoherent when EMTs boarded the plane. An asthma attack was blamed.

To make it even weirder, Sharon Murphy, Brittany's mother, continued to live with Monjack after her daughter's death, even sharing a bed with him.

Hollywood is a weird, scary place, man.

— With additional reporting by Melinda Taub

Because it's not just your house it's your home!

A ghost of the original work

Theater review.
"The Turn of the Screw" fails to fully haunt the unique spaces in which it occupies.

Anna Waldron delivers a fine performance in a middling production. / PROVIDED

Staging a classic 19th century ghost story in a 19th century house sounds like an artful theatrical marriage. Unfortunately, Simple Machine Theatre's production of "The Turn of the Screw" doesn't quite live up to its haunting potential.

Stephen Libby and Anna Waldron (who take on the roles of all of Henry James' characters) certainly deliver compelling performances. Waldron delivers two screams sure to raise your heart rate. Unfortunately, fine acting can't save this show from its failings.

At the performance this reviewer attended (at The Gibson House Museum), it felt like actual ghosts would be more welcome than the audience. Upon arriving, attendees were hustled into a small basement room, where a quick rundown of the house rules preceded the start of the play.

We then schlepped back upstairs to the museum's foyer where we sat, in cramped quarters, for the remainder of the show. The actors performed from various spots on the staircase or in direct line with the audience. The intimacy this afforded proved awkward and, even in the small space, not all of the seats have clear sight lines.

There are also problems with the lighting. The room lights remain on for some of the production and, if in the wrong seat, their glare is distracting. The tricks employed to create a frightening sense of impending calamity or herald the arrival of otherworldly visitors feel only slightly more sophisticated than the ghostly effects rendered by the proverbial little kid with a flashlight.

That said, you don't have to employ the latest high-tech machinations of the haunt industry to create edge of your seat theater. You do have to commit fully to something.

Ultimately, the failure to use the space to its fullest potential — and there is much of it — makes the production's site specifics feel gratuitous. A solid black box staging would likely have been far more effective.

'Up'

Cancel your plans. ABC Family is playing two of our all-time favorite animated "kids" movies, that are actually just as enjoyable (maybe more so) for adults. The back-to-back Pixar marathon starts with "Up," which never fails to make us cry and, it must be said, might be Pixar's greatest accomplishment (sorry, "Toy Story"). Don't leave the couch when the credits start rolling, because "WALL-E" is up next. "WALL-E" is freaking adorable! 7 P.M., ABCFAM

MORE THAN A PRETTY FACE

Evan Rachel Wood plays a Romanian woman fought over by two men in "Charlie Countryman." / WIREIMAGE

Interview. Evan Rachel Wood talks "Charlie Countryman" and missing television.

Evan Rachel Wood is more than an ingenue. She's a serious actor, with a list of impressive performances — an experimenting teen on "Once and Again," an estranged daughter in "The Wrestler," evil Veda in "Mildred Pierce" — under her belt at only 26. In "Charlie Countryman," she's Gabi, a young Romanian being fought over by an American (Shia LaBeouf) and a Eurotrash gangster (Mads Mikkelsen). But there's more to her than her looks.

"It was important that she was not just a pretty face," Wood explains. "She's a very strong, tough, hard girl with many walls. I think the only reason she lets Shia's character in is because he catches her at a very vulnerable moment. I think when you fall in love with people it's when you're at your most vulnerable. All your guards are down."

Wood says working for a visual director like Fredrik Bond requires patience. "It can be very scary for an actor," she says. "But then you see the finished product and you finally get it. You just have to trust them. You have to be able to let go and be at their mercy completely.""

Like many other acclaimed actors, Wood has periodically found her way to the small screen. "A lot of people are flocking to TV now because a lot of things are actually getting made. It's so hard to get a movie made now. And there's such great things happening on TV because there's actually money to make them. And they're ballsy," she says. "I do miss TV sometimes. I do miss getting to know a character so well that you can just walk on set and immediately just start channeling them."

She even got her start doing cheesy TV movies as a child.

"When I was 12 they were the greatest things in the world," she says. "I did one with Meredith Baxter. I got to be kidnapped."

The film also gave her the chance to work with LaBeouf, another actor making the transition to adult roles. Wood, unlike him, has always done adult movies, usually playing a precocious teen. "I think he might have a harder time because started on the Disney Channel," she says. "People want to give him a hard time for that — even though he's so freaking good."

J.J. Abrams: Director, producer and now novelist

Storytelling. Abrams and novelist Doug Dorst reinvent the hardback.

J. J. Abrams conceived the idea for his new novel after finding a left-behind paperback at LAX. / PHOTOS COURTESY OF LITTLE BROWN AND COMPANY

When J.J. Abrams conceived the idea for "S." he knew there was only one way to tell the story — and it wasn't onscreen. There would be no special effects or big-name actors. Abrams felt that the only medium that would work was a good old-fashioned book.

"It all started in LAX when J.J. found a paperback book," co-author Doug Dorst tells Metro. "Someone had written a note to whoever was going to find it." The note got the gears in Abrams' brain turning, and he came up with the idea of telling a story within a story.

"S." is not your typical book. The pages look old and worn, with scribbles all over the margins. There are inserts of photos, postcards and letters tucked into the pages. It's presented as a novel called "Ship of Theseus" written by V.M. Straka. But the notes and inserts tell another story, between a female college senior and a male graduate student who pass the book back and forth, leaving notes to each other.

Since writing a novel is a bit different from writing a script and Abrams was, you know, busy, he enlisted the help of acclaimed writer Dorst. "We spent the better part of a year talking about the characters and why they would pass the book back and forth to each other," Dorst says. "Abrams told me, 'Go, run with it.'" Dorst would pass each chapter off to Abrams, who would then weigh in.

Despite not having everything figured out, Abrams and Dorst were on the same page (metaphorically speaking) the entire time. Though Abrams is familiar with screenwriting, where everything is mapped out beforehand, he adapted to the novel-writing process, letting the story unfold as it was being written.

So, are Abrams and Dorst hoping their book will inspire people to forgo their Kindles and go back to buying hardbacks? "I just want people to read!" Dorst laments. "I don't think one form has to win out over the other."

Rules on Last Month's Rent

By Attorney George Warshaw

The November Metro series is about how to be a better landlord. Knowing the basic rules makes for better tenant relationships and fewer problems.

A residential landlord is permitted by law to take a last month's rent as well as a security deposit.

Unlike a security deposit, which is the tenant's money and must be held in a special escrow type of account, the last month's rent is the landlord's money and can be freely used and spent by the landlord at any time for any purpose.

A landlord who takes a last month's rent is required to pay the tenant interest on it at the rate of 5% a year with one exception: a landlord is entitled to place the rent in a security deposit type of account (or with the security deposit) and in that case, the tenant only gets the interest that is paid by the bank.

What happens if the tenant moves before a full year is up?

The tenant is still entitled to interest for the number of months the landlord had the last month's rent with the exception of the very last month of the tenancy. After all, that's the month for which the rent was taken and actually used.

Arborpoint at MarketStreet includes 180 apartments in three buildings. The first opened in September, the second opened last month and the third will open in December. All three are currently leasing one and two-bedroom apartments, starting at $1940 and $2390 a month. A community clubhouse includes a lounge, demonstration kitchen, conference room and fitness center. There's also a business center with computers and Internet access. A pool is due to open next summer. There are walking trails on the premises and Arborpoint is pet-friendly, with some restrictions. Learn more at www.arborpoint.com.

The North Shore's newest mixed-use development

Real estate. Lynnfield's Arborpoint apartments have got most everything residents need, just steps away.

The Arborpoint apartments aren't just well-furnished, they're also well-situated. / NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

When it comes to buying a home, for many people, it's all about location. And pairing homes with popular retail spots like Whole Foods, Pinkberry and Lululemon makes for great location, indeed. Take Lynnfield, a once quiet North Shore outpost less than half an hour's drive north on I-93. The new MarketStreet shopping center and office development's neighbor is the three-building Arborpoint apartments.

"They were conceived together," says Ted Tye, managing partner of National Development, which is behind the Arborpoint brand. "The biggest trend is mixed-use development that combines retail, residential and business space. The North Shore is very underserved from a retail perspective. We built on a former golf course, right off Route 128, and partnered with WS Developments for the retail side, which is an important extension of modern lifestyles."

Quoted

"The MarketStreet project is bringing the types of restaurants and retail that will thrive in this area of the Greater Boston market."

Frank Stryjewski, Kings COO

Back Bay restaurant Davios has spread its wings to MarketStreet, along with Kings.

"The MarketStreet project is bringing the types of restaurants and retail that will thrive in this area of the Greater Boston market," says Kings COO, Frank Stryjewski. "We saw a similar trend in our location in Dedham at Legacy Place and we are looking forward to similar success in our new home."

But the attractions aren't all commercial. Arborpoint sits adjacent to a 100-acre conservation area.

"Part of the arrangement with the town was a conservation easement," says Tye, "and the good thing is that it is preserved forever."

Holiday season is here and for many people, that means an overload of festive food with a side order of guilt. But maybe we should stop beating ourselves up over a few days, and instead focus on our general food habits.

That's what 35-year-old actress, journalist and beauty icon Maria Menounos did when she was 40 pounds heavier than she is today. We love that she's lost the weight and kept it off, but we also are big fans of her no-guilt attitude for enjoying the holidays. Earlier this month, Ocean Spray set up a giant cranberry bog in NYC's Rockefeller Center, and we chatted up Menounos there to learn how we can adopt her no-shame ways this holiday season.

How do you resist unhealthy foods during the holidays?
I don't resist temptation, and I think that that's the key. Because I don't resist, I don't crave as much. [Recently] I was in the airport and I wanted M&M's so I had M&M's. I didn't eat the whole bag, because once I ate a few I was like, "Huh, I don't need them anymore." But if I were denying myself, then I would want it. I remember from my days when I was heavier people making me feel bad about my weight. Almost to defy them, I would get a gallon of ice cream and hide in the garage and eat the whole thing. So I understand how my mind works, and so when I don't deprive myself, I don't crave it. And when I do [crave something], I have it.

So you can actually go all out during the holiday?
Absolutely. And then I always say, after the meal take everyone for a walk around the neighborhood. Get a little exercise in.

How do you balance food, fitness and fun?
I never deny myself anything. I just keep it to certain portions. I'm not going to overindulge. If I go to a restaurant and I have a bunch of appetizers, I'm not going to get a meal. People don't really listen to their stomachs. With fitness there are times where I can't work out for months. But I make sure I'm always active throughout my day. I'm taking the stairs. I'm running from point A to point B as fast as I can. I'm speed-walking in my office. I make sure to try to get 10,000 steps a day and I don't feel guilty, because sometimes you just can't [work out]. ... If I'm at a restaurant and I want to indulge, I'm not gonna beat myself up about it. I think that mentality is what saves me.

Q&A

So how do you keep from gaining weight if you're indulging over the holidays?
That's a big concern for everybody. I always tell people that are concerned about that to cut back three to four weeks before the holiday just 10 percent of the bad things each week. Just make tiny changes leading up to the holiday so that when you have the holiday you enjoy yourself like I want you to. It's a balance. You have been good for four weeks, so you can have a little here.

You were once 40 pounds heavier — and you said you weren't sorry about it and rocked it. Why did you change your lifestyle?
My dad was diabetic so I was putting myself at risk for diabetes, and at some point I had to look myself in the mirror and say, "You know what? It's one thing to be a little heavier and it's another to have eating contests with boys." I was taking it to another extreme and I was jeopardizing my health and so I had to focus on it. ... I was getting annoyed with having to work harder to find clothes that looked good. So maybe there was a little of that as well, but it really first and foremost was health.

Are you still tempted to eat like you used to?
For sure. And those are times when you just do it. The other night I wanted potato skins and so my boyfriend got potato skins and a soup and a salad. I never even got to the soup and the salad — I ate all of the potato skins myself. Whatever.

Dental Implants: A Great Solution for Missing Teeth or Loose Dentures

By Dr. Constantinos Laskarides

If you or someone you know has missing teeth or loose, uncomfortable dentures, dental implants may be the best solution.

A great advantage of dental implants is that they look and feel like your own natural teeth.

A dental implant is a titanium post that looks like an artificial root and fuses with the jawbone. The crown, which is the visible part of the replacement tooth, connects to the implant and is custom-made to match your surrounding teeth. Dental implants can replace one, several, or all of your teeth.

Dental implants also can reduce your long-term dental costs because, if cared for properly, they can last a lifetime. When an oral surgeon places your dental implant, the implant fills in for the absent root and holds the jawbone in place, and the bond between the jawbone and the implant provides stability and security for the crown. In contrast, bridges and dentures cannot keep the jawbone in place, so your bone wears away and shrinks over time. As a result, bridges and dentures lose their fit and require relining or replacement (sometimes two or more times) and additional expenditures.

Additional long-term benefits of dental implants include:

- Minimal impact on surrounding teeth: Dental implants minimize your chances of additional tooth loss because they stabilize the jaw and require no support from surrounding teeth. In contrast, dental bridges typically require the two adjacent teeth to be ground down to hold crowns that support the crown in the center; this grinding weakens the adjacent teeth so that they may need to be restored in the future.
- Better nutrition & more enjoyable eating: Dental implants can withstand stronger chewing forces than bridges or dentures can; this means you can enjoy a more varied and full diet.
- Easier care: Because dental implants are structurally similar to natural teeth, you usually don't need to make any adjustments to your normal brushing and flossing techniques.
- Way to get more functional, satisfactory & lasting dentures: People with loose dentures also can turn to an oral surgeon for relief. Dental implants can be placed to secure dentures and ensure that they will fit, function and look more attractive for years to come.
- Improved smile & confidence: People with dental implants often have a more attractive smile and renewed self-confidence.

Given all of these advantages, dental implants offer the best tooth replacement technology available in modern dentistry. Call Tufts Dental Associates to have a leading-edge dentist evaluate if dental implants are the best option for you.

Dr. Constantinos Laskarides D.M.D., D.D.S., Pharm.D, F.I.C.D. is an Associate Professor of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine in downtown Boston. He teaches and trains residents in implant surgery and more complex surgery of the jaws and the face. Dr. Laskarides also sees patients privately at Tufts Dental Associates, the full-service faculty practice at Tufts Dental School. Tufts Dental Associates offers a full range of general and specialty dental services within one practice.

HOW TO BE GOOD — OR BE VERY, VERY EVIL

Instead

Price: Free

An app called Instead, from Oven Bits, LLC, placates our need to be both charitable and thrifty. Rather than eat out, it asks you to eat in and donate the money saved (about $5 a day) to a charity for, say, HIV medicine. Pack a lunch three times a week, and the cash not spent goes to provide others with clean water.

Charity Miles

Price: Free

Charity Miles is even more hands-on. It calculates how much exercise you're getting, whether you're walking, running or cycling. For every mile you rack up, a set amount of cash is fired off to a charity of your choice: the Special Olympics, Stand Up to Cancer, The World Food Programme, etc. The energy spent will be entirely for your own purposes, even as it goes to those in need.

Karaoke Anywhere

Price: Free or $1.99

Unlike these other two apps, Karaoke Anywhere is not a force for good. It is a force for evil.

Until now, the act of singing — badly or scarily well — along to popular (or not so popular) songs has been restricted to bars where the staff has resigned themselves to hearing people do "Achy Breaky Heart" ad nauseam.

Plague the world with bad singing with Karaoke Anywhere. / PROVIDED

When karaoke expanded to the home, with games like "Rock Band" and others, that was fine because it was contained.

But Karaoke Anywhere puts it on your phone, meaning it won't be long before drunk Millennials in the park are passing the phone and shouting their way through Cee Lo's "F— You."

However, if any of you try Plastic Bertrand's "Ca Plane Pour Moi" — an obscure Belgian punk tune which is also available on this app — we will definitely be impressed. Maybe it's not all evil.

Lissie

On tour to promote her latest album, "Back to Forever," Lissie hits Boston on Friday (Nov. 22) for a show at Royale (279 Tremont St). While traveling between cities every day, the singer relies on:

Sudoku (Optime arts version): It helps to pass time and I'd like to think it's good for my brain.

Instagram: It's a good way to share what I'm up to and see what my friends and family are up to as well.

Twitter: I can thank those who come to the gigs and the encouraging feedback keeps me going!

MyFitnessPal: On the road I don't eat very well and drink too much and get a bit of a gut! ... This app helps me be mindful ... and lets me set exercise goals.

United Airlines app: I'm a big nerd about my mileage. I stay loyal to United and had flown 100,000 miles by September. ... I'm always fiddling with my app to make sure I'm eligible for upgrades. METRO

Baldwin deserves an award, not an ambush

Re: 'Baldwin uses hate speech, threatens to quit acting' (Metro, Nov. 18) I am a neighbor, and I am sick and tired of the photographers in our neighborhood who make Mr. Alec Baldwin's life miserable. He is a kind, generous person who does not deserve the negative media attention published. Mr. Baldwin is polite and his philanthropic work is somehow never mentioned. In my opinion he deserves a special honorarium for all his good works.

An answer far afield

Re: Crossword (Metro, Nov. 14) Just a small correction for your puzzle. In the clue for 41 DOWN, "Isle off Sicily," the answer was "Elba" — but the island of Elba is quite far away from Sicily. It is much farther north, off the coast of Tuscany. It is well known for being where Napoleon was exiled. At best, it could be the island off Sardinia.
PIERA RULLI, VIA EMAIL

A beast of a perception problem

The rationale behind employment or insurance based on obesity seems to be that employers (and society) perceive it as a lifestyle choice. Given that it has significant genetic factors, however, it ultimately comes across as a similar move to penalizing those with a family history of cancer. If we really want to penalize for choices that cost money and shorten livelihood, we should target the consumption of animal products, with overwhelming evidence that this choice leads to increased disease. CHARLES BOSSE, VIA EMAIL

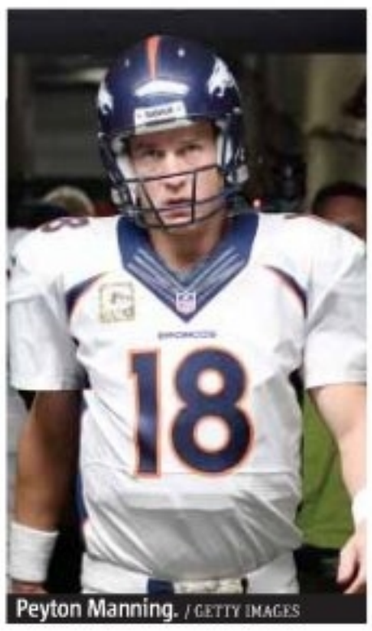
A classic in the cards

NFL. Tom Brady and Peyton Manning will renew their epic rivalry Sunday.

NBC has been hyping Brady-Manning XIV since Labor Day, and rightfully so.

Tom Brady and Peyton Manning are the premier quarterbacks of this generation, have been dueling since 2001 and, unfortunately for fans, are running out of time. Football mortality is creeping in for both future Hall-of-Famers. It's another subplot for just how special this 14th meeting will be between the two Sunday in Foxboro (8:30 p.m., NBC).



Peyton Manning. / GETTY IMAGES

Tom Brady. / GETTY IMAGES

In their last five meetings, dating back to the Patriots crushing loss to Manning's Colts in the 2006 AFC Championship Game, Brady has the overall edge with a 3-2 record. Manning and the Colts took advantage of the Brady-less Patriots in 2008, beating Matt Cassel and Co., 18-15. Interestingly enough, Manning had his most efficient game against the Patriots since 2007 when Brady was injured as he posted a 121.9 QB rating with 254 yards, two touchdowns and zero interceptions in the Nov. 2, 2008, game.

The Patriots took the only matchup so far with Manning in orange as New England beat the Broncos, 31-21 last season in Foxboro. Manning played well in the Broncos loss, completing 31-of-44 for 345 yards and three touchdowns but his third quarter fumble on a sack proved costly.

Brady and the Pats also won in 2010, the final time Manning played at Gillette in a Colts uniform. Bill Belichick's defense picked off Manning three times in that meeting though No. 18 had four touchdown passes.

Manning and the Colts won the famed "fourth-and-2" game in 2009, the Patriots won on their way to an undefeated regular season in 2007 and Manning exorcised some demons in the 2006 AFC title game.

In the past five meetings, the two have similar numbers. Brady has a 102.6 QB Rating while averaging 254 yards passing with 2.0 TD passes and 0.8 INTs. Manning is averaging a 94.2 QB Rating with 326 yards passing, 2.6 TDs and 1.4 INTs.

Brady is 9-4 overall in his career against Manning.
